THE TRICKY BRAIN CELL.

What Happens When We Know a Name Which Escapes Us.

The anatomy of the nervous system, and consequently its physiology, was regarded in the past as very simple. Cayal showed that the specific brain cell is an independent unit provided with multiple processes, by means of which it is capable of acting not through one nerve alone, but several. This independent brain unit or cell is called a neuron. A simple illustration of how the neuron works is furnished by our not infrequent hunt for a name or an idea which we know we possess. We feel that the name is there, but we cannot recall it. We get various names near it, beginning even with the same letter or the same vowel sound, yet only after minutes or even hours does it actually occur to us.

What is supposed to happen is that the particular cell of intellection which we are using throws out its process among the cells of memory for names, and though this process is brought in connection with cells containing similar names, it is only after a more or less prolonged search that it hits on the right one. It is as if the telephone operator in the central office felt around blindly for the connection wanted, and only after putting the plug into various holes eventually struck the proper one. —Dr. Joseph Walsh in Booklovers Magazine.

The Elusive Lead Pencils.

What becomes of the lead pencils is as insolvable a problem as what becomes of pins. No one ever really uses up lead pencils; no one drinks them, so to speak, to the very dregs, unless it is one of those admirable people who keep journals and cash accounts and who usually carry a sort of penholder arrangement in which they insert a half length pencil and go on and on using it and sharpening it until it is all gone. Very few people ever get pencils worn down as far as a half length. They disappear before that stage is reached. What becomes of them all? Hundreds of thousands of them annually are lent to young children and never seen again, but what do the children do with them? Do they eat them up? Possibly.

Everybody has seen lead pencils the upper end of which have been chewed into a brush, but children do not possess such ostrich stomachs as would enable them to consume all the pencils that disappear.

The Gloomy Sentries.

To and fro march the sentries in front of Buckingham palace, meeting face to face for a moment and then separating without a word, as if their feud were too deep for speech. This spectacle is watched with sympathetic interest by American visitors, who occasionally intervene. The sentries were glaring at each other one morning when a stranger standing close by remarked, "Come, boys, make it up!" Another American proposed to heal the breach with a little friendly conversation. "Say, does your king live here?" he opened genially. The two sentries stared impassively and then resumed their tramp. Up came a policeman. "Can I tell you anything, sir?" said he. "Yes," answered the American. "Tell me why these young hearts are silent and sore. Anyhow, why can't they whistle. We never speak when we pass by?" —London Chronicle.

The Lady and Her Nose.

There is a washerwoman in Paris who is in great trouble. Two years ago she had a fight with her husband, in the course of which so much skin was taken from her nose that some new had to be grafted on. Recently she made the horrifying discovery that a fine coat of hair was growing in her new nose and then learned that the doctors at the hospital who had treated her had used skin from a human scalp for grafting purposes. The poor washerwoman then went to the courts to ask for a divorce, urging cruelty as cause, because it was her husband's brutality which took the original skin off her nose which resulted in the grafting, the hair and the ridicule of her neighbors.

Sun Drunkenness.

To become sun drunk is a condition into which any one may fall in the tropics. Exposure to the sun's rays will reduce a man to a condition almost exactly resembling drunkenness. He staggers about and is usually compelled to lie down and "sleep it off." Sun drunkenness is sometimes accompanied by nausea. Another curious fact in connection with life in the tropics, where the sun rises at the same time all the year round, is that if you do not get up before sunrise you do not feel well all day. You feel heavy, out of sorts and have a tendency to sickness.

Your Shadow.

Every one of us casts a shadow. There hangs about us a sort of penumbra—a strange indefinable something which we call personal influence—which has its effect on every other life on which it falls. It goes with us wherever we go. It is not something we can have when we want to have it and then lay aside at will, as we lay aside a garment. It is something that always pours out from our life, like light from a lamp, like heat from a flame, like perfume from a flower.

DANGER IN THE HIGH DIVE.

Deafness a Frequent Injury to Those Not Initiated.

"Except for those who have an especial aptitude for it—and they are few—high diving is a dangerous pastime to indulge in," said a diving expert the other day. "A good diver may occasionally lose his balance, but, being generally cool headed, he can regain it, or at any rate sufficiently so as to prevent injury to himself."

"In the majority of cases deafness is the most frequent injury inflicted by diving. The cause of this is that few find it easy to drop the head sufficiently to get it well between the arms. The result is they receive some tremendous blows on the head, and if the water is struck a bit sideways the ear gets most of the concussion, and the result will frequently be a rupture of the membrane of the tympanum. A good preventive for such an accident is to place in the ears a little medicated wool or cotton dipped in oil."

"Another injury to health caused frequently by diving arises from getting large quantities of water into the lungs. The extent of the harm done in cases of this sort depends on the condition of the water as to its cleanliness. I have often seen boys, for instance, dive into water at places where it was absolutely filthy from the evacuation of drainage into it. The danger to health, especially to those with not overstrong constitutions, can readily be seen."

"The higher the dive the longer, of course, will be the duration under water. Now, an inexperienced diver is rarely able to hold his breath under water for more than a second or two at a time, and if the dive is an unusually high one he will in nine cases out of ten give up the struggle in trying to retain his breath and invariably, too, just before his head reaches the surface. The result not infrequently is that the water that has escaped into his lungs and stomach is far more than is good for him, and to many it is positively injurious."

"The best thing I know of to bring one quickly to the surface in high diving is to have a piece of cork fastened under each armpit. Corks weighing four ounces each are sufficiently strong in buoyancy for a man of 150 pounds in weight. There are many devices by which the corks can be kept secured under the armpits. Perhaps the simplest is to sew each cork into a tight fitting canvas or cotton bag and then again sew each bag on to the bathing suit by a couple of strands, allowing the strands to run over the shoulders."

"Those with weak hearts," the expert added, "cannot be too strongly advised against high diving. The spring, the rush through space, the break and the entering and cleaving of the water are altogether too exciting for weak hearts, and especially so in cold weather." —Philadelphia Ledger.

A Miser's Last Wish.

A Greek died in the small town of Caracal, having always lived on the alms of his compatriots. Before dying he made his wife swear that she would bury him in the dirty old overcoat which he wore every day. The poor woman had to ask the Greeks of Caracal to help her to provide the costs of the funeral. A good hearted Greek went to see her in her affliction and, pointing to the body, said he would give her a better coat to bury the man in. Then she told him of the dead man's last wish. The Greek, whose suspicions were awakened, told her that she should certainly not part with the body before she had well examined the coat, for there must be some particular reason for the request. The widow unpicked the lining of the overcoat and found 35,000 francs in bank notes which the miser wished to take into the grave with him.

His Time Was Not Up.

A man of a mercenary spirit had several sons, one of whom was on the eve of his twenty-first birthday. The father had always been a strict disciplinarian, keeping his boys well under parental charge, allowing them few liberties and making them work hard. It was with a feeling of considerable satisfaction that the young man rose on the morning of his birthday and began to collect his personal belongings preparatory to starting out in the world.

The farmer, seeing his son packing his trunk, which he rightly judged to be evidence of the early loss of a good farm hand, stopped at the door of the young man's room and asked what he was going to do.

The boy very promptly reminded his father of the day of the month and the year and declared his intention of striking out in the world on his own account.

"Not much you won't," shouted the old man, "at least not for awhile yet! You wasn't born until after 12 o'clock, so you can just take off them good clothes and fix to give me another half day's work down in the potato patch."

His Souvenir.

"Bring any souvenirs back from your trip?"
"One only, but it cost a lot."
"What was it?"
"Empty pocketbook." — Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Some people talk as if they thought everything that dropped from their lips was a "bon mot." —Atchison Globe.

Odd Death of a Bird.

A curious instance of bird death is recorded by W. E. D. Scott in his "Story of a Bird Lover." He tells a story of a kingfisher who was shot, pursued his flight, apparently unhurt, for 200 feet, and then dropped dead. Still, when the body was examined there was no mark of a wound upon it, which gave rise to the possibility that a wild bird could be frightened to death. "I have seen the same thing happen many times since," continues the story. "I know now the reason for this. A single shot striking a bird in flight, penetrating the thin side of his body and entering his lungs, makes a very small hole, and no external hemorrhage ensues. There is little or no shock to the bird. I fancy he hardly feels pain, but presently the internal hemorrhage from the great blood vessels that have been severed makes him suddenly unconscious, and in a moment he is dead. The time, however, between the penetrating of the shot and the internal hemorrhage is sufficient to allow the animal to travel a very considerable distance seemingly uninjured."

WINE OF CARDUI

is a thoroughly scientific and modern remedy, meeting the needs of the modern woman in the modern way—without the torture of an operation. Wine of Cardui has cured them in the privacy of their homes and it has found a place in the hearts of American women that no other medicine has found. In their gratitude over 10,000 American women have written letters commending Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui meets their wants as no other medicine does. It sustains the young girl at the shock of her entrance to womanhood. Women who take Wine of Cardui have little discomfort during pregnancy and little pain at childbirth. When the change of life appears they enter a happy, healthy old age. Every month it comes to the rescue to assist Nature in throwing the impurities from the body.

Miss Sarah Finley, of Memphis, Tenn., vice-president of the Palmetto Club of that city, speaks for herself and many friends when she bestows the following praise on Wine of Cardui:

"Among the numerous medicines placed before suffering women for their relief none can touch McElree's Wine of Cardui. It towers above them all as a reliable female remedy. It simply drives pain and disease away and restores health in an incredibly short period. I have taken great interest in this medicine for the past two years, since it brought health and strength to me. I have also recommended it to a number of my friends and they who have used it speak of it in the highest terms and I feel that it is praise well bestowed."

If you are suffering from female weakness Wine of Cardui is the medicine you need.

You can have health the same as Miss Finley if you will take the Wine of Cardui treatment. If you need advice further than the complete directions given on the bottle, address The Ladies Advisory Department, Chattanooga Med. Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

After all, about the best way to adorn the the festive boll weevil with a beautiful black eye is to raise plenty of corn and forage crops, and have plenty of hogs;
grow your own potatoes, beans and peas, and have plenty of hogs; if possible, raise fruits and vegetables for home use in season and to preserve for a rainy day, and have lots

If you haven't plenty of hogs, you'll

The General's Nose.

Like Cyrano de Bergerac, General B. of the regular army was possessed of a nose which excited curiosity, if not comment, wherever he appeared. At one of the hops given at the post the dancers wore fancy dress and masks.
The general's partner chanced to be a vivacious young thing who had never met him before. Nor was she any the wiser as to his identity when, following the custom at mask balls, he removed the covering from his face. His partner followed suit, and her prattle ceased for awhile. Then she remarked, reproachfully: "Oh, but it isn't fair!
You haven't taken off your nose!"—

Another red letter day was scored for the M. I. C., on Wednesday, Oct.
6th, when the members, met for the first time in their new club rooms in the handsome Library building.
The incoming president assumed the reins of government for the first time exhibiting in her ease of management the tact of a veteran.

This was President's Day and for the occasion Mrs. Lawrence beautified the rooms with rich tued rugs
handsome chairs, beautiful plants, ferns, palms and cut roses. An air of cheerfulness pervaded the bright rooms and everything went off with the ease that only attention to detail and careful planing can assure.

The annual address was a masterpiece of original bits of humor alternating with eloquence and plain unvarnished truths, the cardinal principles being unity, altruism, concentration. These three points were woven into an appeal of matchless eloquence, delivered as only one of Mrs. Lawrence's spirituelle nature is capable.

Never has the club season opened with more brilliant prospects and each member present seemed to realize it.

The "conversation contest" was the occasion of pleasurable interest and surprised many "thought jewels" hidden in the various recesses of the mind.

Assisted by Mesdames McQueen
and Nagle, Mrs. Lawrence served dainty refreshments consisting of a salad course with cheese sticks and wafers and an ice.

Several graceful notes were read,
acknowledgements of some courtesy extended, one to Mrs. George Brandon expressing appreciation of the entire membership for her gift to the club—the Shakespeare questions as compiled by Miss Friend. This meeting so elegantly planned and

The Chaffing Dish Club met Friday afternoon with Miss Ed Hall in her handsome new home, thrown open to entertain friends for the first time.
Lovely in all its arrangements and furnishings, the rooms, reception hall, parlor, library and dining room, were still further beautified by pot plants and cut flowers, for which Mrs. Hall was indebted to thoughtful friends.
Six tables were provided for flinch
and Mrs. P. S. Tilson was the victor.
No prizes being given in the club,
the distinction was marked by the graceful presentation of a perfect rose by Mrs. A. J. Buchanan, who said:

"In behalf of our hostess I bring to you, not 'burnished gold,' nor silver vase, nor yet a 'gem of purest ray serene,' but the queen of all Nature's beauteous gifts—a rose. As you look into its perfumed heart, may it breathe its peace and purity into your very soul, and when time has rolled away the years, and the frosts of many winters shall have faded out its beauty, and touched your hair with grey, may it speak to you again
from its pressed bed in some time worn volume, and bring to your mind tender memories of a merry party with Mrs. Hall, in the sweet, sweet long ago."

There was a full attendance of members and the name of Mrs. Malcolm Carnes was added to the club roll. Guests present were Mesdames E. J. Fountain, Mooring, Oliver,
Clarke, McQueen, A. J. Buchanan,
Boyle, Julia Wipprecht, G. S. Parker, Emory, Goodwin, Wilkerson,
W. O. Sanders, Haswell, Doremus,
Jno. M. Lawrence.

Salted nuts, cream and cake were served.

The music recital at the opera house Friday night, given under the auspices of the ladies of the Baptist church, was a pleasing, and artistic entertainment by local talent. The numbers evinced appreciative selection and careful arrangement and all were well rendered.

The members of the senior classes
of Villa Maria Ursuline Academy
met in the Library Monday evening at 7 o'clock for the purpose of reorganizing the Literary club. The election of officers resulted as follows:
Miss Pauline Williams of Durango, Mexico, President; Miss Dollie Akin
of Redwater, Vice-president; Miss Sibbie Van Wormer of Beaumont, Treasurer; Miss Fannie Fountain of Bryan Secretary; Misses, Sara Chew
of Bryan, Bertha Delaune of Beaumont and Katie Wray Ward of Ballington, executive committee.

The name of the society was changed from St. Ursula's Literary club to St. Ursula's Reading club.

The club has decided to take up for this year a study of the lives of the great men and women of our Century as well as the current events of the day. All of the latest and best books and magazines are being placed in the Library at the disposal of its members.

The officers being duly installed
the President called the club to order—after which the Constitution was read and a lesson assigned for the next meeting. The club then adjourning to meet Monday evening
Oct. 12, 1903.

Frances Fountain, Sec'y.

Miss Lucy Board entertained the "Bachelor Girls" in a charming manner Wednesday afternoon. A full attendance added to the pleasure of the occasion. Progressive flinch was the feature of entertainment.
Quite a novel manner of scoring was introduced. Each score card had tiny streamers of pink and green—
the club colors—and as the player progressed pictures of men were tied to the string. When the games were called Miss Crudginton, who had succeeded in getting the greatest number of "men on her string," was presented a dainty stock, the artistic work of the hostess. A hugh palm leaf fan, with a set of improved rules for playing flinch was awarded to Miss Emily Thomas. Sherbet and wafers were served, after which the club adjourned to meet with Miss Boatwright next time. Miss Weeden was guest of honor.

The Shakespeare Club met with Mrs. W. A. Withers in her pretty home near the graded school Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock and held a most pleasant and profitable meeting devoted to the reading and discussion of Act I, scenes I and II of Julius Caesar. The questions prepared by Miss Friend will be taken up next. A interesting feature of this club for the coming year will be a quotation contest in which Mrs.
W. H. Oliver and Mrs. Floy Dansby have offered a prize to the member showing the greatest familiarity with quotations. The contest will last throughout the club year, and has already awakened great interest.

THE LEONINE DUMAS.

How His Worshipers Adored Their Literary Idol.

One evening in the beginning of June I was taken to the residence of Dumas, on the Boulevard Malesherbes, by an intimate friend of the great novelist. As one thinks of a lion, with his shaggy mane full of the jungle burs of adventure, so I can see the author of "Monte-Christo" as he appeared on that memorable evening. Standing about were women friends, actresses, writers, poets, attracted by a world of romance symbolized in the figure seated in the middle of the salon. I was instantly impressed with two things—the frescoes on the walls and the attitude of the host. He sat like a silent oracle, surrounded by a crowd of female admirers, the whole company set off by panels representing life sized figures from Goethe's great drama—Faust, Mephistopheles, Marguerite. There were no other pictures in the room. The influence of these figures, the attitude of Dumas and his worshipers, concentrated the mind on the quintessential element of romance. Half indifferent he sat, as some handsome young woman would stroke his head, while another would place her hand on his shoulder, as they might have done with an old lion long tamed and without teeth. There was nothing to distract the mind from the harmony of idea and personality—the company of women might have been part of the frescoes and Dumas the creator of "Faust" instead of "Monte-Christo." There was an enchanted element about the people and the room.

The whole company conversed among themselves, standing as if they were at court, while the host sat still and mused. I was held by the mystery, the fascination of the romantic atmosphere, the peculiar spell of the huge mass that filled the faueteil like an idol of adamant. For there was something of the idol about the man. I thought of a Buddhist statue in a sitting posture, corpulent at the base, crisp at the top. The lower part of the face was of porcine dimensions, the skin swarthy, the hair curly, the expression of the eyes calm and sphinx-like. He was a man who not only had invented life, but had seen it.—Critic.

Sympathy.

Young Wife (rather nervously)—Oh cook, I must really speak to you. Your master is always complaining. One day it is the soup, the second day it is the fish, the third day it is the joint. In fact, it's always something or other. Cook (with feeling)—Well, mum, I'm sorry for you. It must be quite awful to live with a gentleman of that sort.—London Punch.

A Cabman's Retort.

Irascible Old Gentleman (putting head out of four wheeler that is crawling along at an unconscionable pace)—I say, cabby, we're not going to a funeral. Cabby (promptly)—No, and we ain't goin' to no bloomin' fire either.—London Tit-Bits.

Fate's Ironies.

Fate at times works some strange ironies. Mr. McHugh, an Irish member of parliament, some years ago brought forward a bill for the amendment of the law relating to contempt of court in Ireland and was soon afterward sentenced to three months' imprisonment for that offense. Mr. McHugh's bill was sent to him in proof form while he was undergoing his sentence and revised in Kilmainham jail.

Two convicts were executed at the Ichigaya prison in Japan, and one of them as he ascended the guillotine remarked that he had built it himself while serving a sentence for larceny two years before.

A few years ago a story came from a town in Staffordshire, England, of a man who took his dog to the river to drown it in order to save the expense of a license, but slipped and was drowned himself, while the dog returned home.

Tree and Plant Leaves.

The general arrangement of the leaves on limbs and stalks of trees and plants secures between each sufficient space to prevent one leaf from interfering with another. And not only are leaves so arranged as to exist independently of each other, but in a general way they have taken upon themselves the forms best adapted to secure the maximum of sunlight as it is showered upon them in different latitudes. At the equator, where the sun's rays are vertical, we find large flat leaves like those of the banana, plantain and the various species of the cactus.

Farther north, where sunlight strikes at an angle, small leaves and pine "needles" are found. Then again note the peculiarity of the Australian gum tree. Instead of exposing their broad faces to the sun the edges only are so turned. Were it otherwise the sun would rob them of all their moisture, it being a well known fact that the gum tree grows in the driest region on earth.

The Bald Dr. Smith.

While Dr. Theobald Smith was a lecturer on bacteriology in the medical department of the Columbian university a boy came to him with a message from a relative who was visiting in Washington. When the boy saw the doctor he put the note back in his pocket, saying, "It's another Dr. Smith the note is for."

"Let me see the name on the envelope," said the doctor curiously. "That is my name. The note is for me."

"But I was told," replied the boy, "to give it to the bald Dr. Smith."

"Oh, you got turned around a little on the name, that's all," replied the doctor, reaching for the note.

And it took considerable argument to convince the boy he was the right man.

Considerable Comment.

New York, Aug. 28.—In the large Syrian colony in this city news of the assassination of Magelssen, vice consul at Beirut, Syria, caused much comment. It is believed he had either fallen a victim to fanatical hatred because he was a Christian or because of his efficient and earnest labors in behalf of his country and countrymen. Several native Syrians expressed the belief that the murder was not of a political nature, but resulted from a personal difficulty.

Patience and Patients.

"You have not taken the medicine I left," asked the physician with some anger. "I declare such actions as that simply make me lose my patience!" "Well, doctor," meekly smiled the suffering one, "I was afraid if I continued to take your medicine you would lose another of your patients."

Realizing that the case was hopeless, the physician left the house.

Now, What Did He Mean?

He—This is the ladies' gallery. Over there is the men's gallery. Just above the speaker's desk is the press gallery. She—Oh, yes, and where is the rogues' gallery?

He—Why—the congressmen sit down there on the main floor.—Baltimore Herald.

The Limit Reached.

The prisoner, a faded, battered specimen of mankind, on whose haggard face, deeply lined with the marks of dissipation, there still lingered faint reminders of better days long past, stood dejectedly before the judge.

"Where are you from?" asked the magistrate.

"From Boston," answered the accused man.

"Indeed," said the judge—"indeed yours is a sad fall, and yet you don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have sunk."

The man started as if struck. "Your honor does me an injustice," he said bitterly. "The disgrace of arrest for drunkenness, the mortification of being thrust into the noisome dungeon, the publicity and humiliation of trial in a crowded and dingy court room I can bear, but to be sentenced by a police magistrate who splits his infinitives—that is indeed the last blow."—New York Times.

Just Passing.

"Are you acquainted with Mrs. Tubby?"

"Yes; we have a passing acquaintance."

"Oh, as much as that?"

"Yes. We were at the same card table once. She passed, and so did I."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Remedy.

He—The doctor told Jack that he had been studying too hard lately.

She—And what did he recommend?

He—Oh, he advised him to go into society a little more and give his brain a rest.—Brooklyn Life.

None Needed.

She—Mamma says I mustn't encourage you at all.

He—That's all right. I don't need any encouragement. — Philadelphia Press.

Smart Girl.

"Do you know," said Miss Bunting, "Mildred Gildersleeve almost coaxed Mr. Fillmore to propose to her. That's how she became engaged."

"Ah, begged the question, did she?" replied Mr. Larkin.—Detroit Free Press.

How easy, is it not, for the strong to advise the weak, for the well to advise the sick.—Schoolmaster.

ROASTING MEATS.

A Chef Says the Proper Process is Almost Unknown.

"A good part of the dyspepsia that prevails in America," said the chef of an exclusive hotel to a Philadelphia Record writer, "is due to the custom of baking instead of roasting meats. We say we roast our meats. We talk glibly of 'roast beef,' 'roast chicken' and so on, but what we should say is 'baked beef' and 'baked chicken,' for anything cooked in an oven is baked, not roasted. We don't talk of roast bread, do we? Yet we cook our meat in the oven as our bread is cooked."

"To roast meat you must cook it on a spit before the fire. You must turn it constantly. Every little while you must baste it. It is in every way better than meat baked. It is tenderer, sweeter and more digestible. Also its appearance is more appetizing, and the appearance of a viand has a tremendous effect on its digestibility."

"Experiment, actual experiment, has shown that the sight of an appetizing dish starts the gastric juice to flowing instantly and that such a dish digests much more quickly and thoroughly than an unappetizing one. Altogether, we ought to go back to the genuine roasting process of our ancestors, and our health would improve and there would be less talk about vegetarianism."

"Of course I and all good chefs actually roast meat. But roasting is with the average cook in the average American house an unknown process."

The Jewels of a Saint.

The idea of sanctity usually carries with it a suggestion of poverty, and it may seem a contradiction to refer to the jewels of a saint. It has been customary for painters who choose for their subjects saints or martyrs to treat them with the utmost simplicity. In a majority of cases they are depicted as devoid of ornament or decoration, and in the few exceptional instances, as when the subject of the picture is a ruler or king, the gems are few and purely symbolic, being sufficient only to denote the rank of the individual portrayed.

Raphael, who was perhaps the greatest painter of religious subjects the world has known, has in most of his works adhered strictly to this rule, but in the head of "St. Cecilia" is to be noticed a departure from it. A row of pearls, to which are attached three pendants, ornaments her gown at the neck, and this is her only jewelry. The hair is simply arranged and without a jewel of any kind. The single row of gems, themselves the emblems of chastity, emphasizes the exquisite simplicity of the face.

Mary Had to "Nail" Her Man.

Mary was a domestic treasure, and when she gave her mistress a month's notice on the plea that she was going to be married there was weeping and wailing in the household.

"Oh, Mary, wouldn't you be willing to oblige me by putting off your marriage for a week if am not suited when your notice expires?" asked her distressed employer.

"Well, ma'am, I wouldn't mind waiting myself," was the reply, "but men is different. If you don't nail 'em when they're ready for it you can't nail 'em at all."—New York Press.

What Emerson Wanted.

"Those who knew Mr. Emerson best," said Miss Louisa M. Alcott, "were assured that what seemed the decline of his faculties in his latter years was largely but a seeming. It was only words he could not command at will. His very forgetfulness of the names of things would often give occasion for a flash of his quaint, shrewd wit. I remember once he started for his usual walk, when a light shower came up, and he returned for his umbrella."

"He could not remember the word umbrella, and we, who had not noticed the shower, had no clue to what he was searching for. Another walking stick was brought him, another hat, a fresh kerchief, only to be refused with that perplexed shake of the head. 'I want,' said he at last—I want—that thing—that your friends always borrow—and never—bring back!' Could any one fail to recognize that description?"

Plover's Eggs.

Few people realize that there are other eggs besides those of hens which have enormous commercial value. In England so called "plover's eggs," which are really those of lapwings, are sent to the city markets from the rural districts by hundreds of thousands. They are esteemed a great delicacy and fetch a very high price, the use of them being for that reason confined almost exclusively to the aristocracy and other luxurious persons. Being only about the size of pigeons' eggs, a good many of them are required to make a dish. Men make a business of gathering them from the nests in marshes and wet fields.—London Standard.

Michael Angelo's Attempt at Suicide.

Michael Angelo, after receiving a painful injury to his leg by falling from a scaffold while at work upon "The Last Judgment," became so melancholy that he shut himself in his room, refused to see any one and "resolved to let himself die." Fortunately his intentions were frustrated by the celebrated physician Baccio Rontini, who learned by accident of his condition.

The Latest College Yell.

"Just as Gladys was preparing to sing 'Douglas, Douglas,' into a phonograph for young Rushmore last night a mouse ran across her ankle."

"What happened?"

"Rushmore swiped the phonograph record, and now his class is said to have the most blood curdling college yell that was ever heard."—Houston Post.
